

About Missie Shimizu

Missie Shimizu was an elementary school teacher until she went home to raise her two boys. As her boys reached school age, her husband wanted to homeschool, but she had faith in the local public school. It was during her eldest son's first grade year that all her plans changed. She discovered that he is dyslexic and the school was not willing to assist her without a fight. She decided the best way to educate both her boys was to bring them home. She is now a homeschooling mom to two rambunctious boys.

She believes that anyone can homeschool, and wants to encourage anyone thinking about homeschooling to go for it.

Website: www.survivinghomeschool.net