

About Stephanie Sledge

Stephanie Sledge is the creator of The Government Rag Educational Alternative News website. Stephanie is an author, independent researcher, freelance writer, and investigative journalist. She graduated from NW Missouri State University with a degree in 'Big Business' management. While attending the University as a non-traditional student, she began to realize that she was being indoctrinated in many classes towards a globalistic business model that indoctrinates the future business managers to think like the global players and manage money like the money masters. Even though Stephanie awakened to the globalist plays and manipulative money handling, she continued learning so that she could understand the overall business plan, which she feels will ultimately lead to the destruction of America. Stephanie feels that attending NW Missouri State University was an amazing positive experience as she gained valuable knowledge, tools, experience, friends, and professional associates to take her to the next level in her career.

Since graduating, she has engaged in investigative journalism to uncover the globalist's business plan, world agenda, and plans for America. Stephanie also explores and engages in small business entrepreneurship and mentors other businesses towards a local, more community business approach. Stephanie has been quoted saying, "I got my degree in Globalism so that I could understand the Globalist Elites better." This gives her the upperhand in this fight to keep the small businesses fighting to rise above Big Business and take back the American dream.. Stephanie has continued her knowledge base by working closely with professionals and learning from the real teachers, and studying the real facts.
